ICE! ICE! ICE!—The subscriber having succeeded, at a very great expense, in filling his large house with Potomac Ice, of a very superior quality, is now prepared to receive orders for the coming season.

He would advise all private families, keepers of hotels, boarding-houses, confectionaries, &c., who wish a supply through the entire season, to make early application, and they will not be disappointed, as many were last summer, by one or two small dealers in that article, who attempted to furnish and failed in the hottest weather, when it was most wanted.

He has the largest house in the District, and will feel bound to furnish those who commence with him until next December if they require it.

Persons wishing ice before the season for delivering from the wagons, can get it by sending to the store, where it is kept constantly on hand.

LOVE AND PATRIOTISM, a Poem, by Richard L. Stewart Evans, Counsellor-at-Law, for sale at Brooke's periodical agency, and at Taylor's, Morrison's, and Farnham's bookstores.

The following extracts are taken from some of the notices:

From the National Intelligencer.

LOVE AND PATRIOTISM, a Poem, pronounced by Richard S. Evans, at Bowdoin College, at the annual commencement. Portland—Charles Day & Co., printers.

The above is the title of a poem, by Richard S. Evans, of Washington, which has been just published in Portland, Maine. The following remarks upon this performance, are from the Portland Daily Advertiser, of September 7. It was amusing to listen to the observation to this performance. Nonsense, says one. Beautiful, adds another. Horrible, splendid, silly, and grand, were epithets profusely lavished. Surely that man is a poet who gains such praise and such abuse. And verily we believe Evans can and did write poetry. There were parts of this Poem which appeared as pure and gorgeous poetry; for instance, the allusion to the American Bird in connexion with Poland; Campbell himself has not done better, &c.

From the Globe.

The following brief allusion to Poland, is from Evans's Poem on Love and Patriotism, a production which is very highly praised, &c.

From the Alexandria Gazette.

Mr. Richard S. Evans is a gentleman who has long occupied a conspicuous station, as an anonymous writer, in some of the principal literary journals; and to whom the world is indebted, for some of the finest specimens of poetry and learning, &c.

POLITICAL.
MR. CLAY IN VIRGINIA.

Mr. Clay arrived at Petersburg, the "Cockade Town" of Virginia, on the evening of Thursday last, at 8 o'clock. The Petersburg Intelligencer of Tuesday contains an animated account of the reception of Mr. Clay, from which we make a few extracts. At every depot and watering station on the road from Raleigh to Petersburg (says that paper) crowds of people were assembled—some to take a look at the Great Man of the age, and many to join the cars and accompany him to Petersburg.

The day was wet and inclement, but wind and weather were not able to overcome the desire of the people to do honor to him to whom honor was so eminently due—and when the train reached the depot in Petersburg, thousands were found in the midst of a hard rain awaiting the arrival of the illustrious guest. Upon his arrival he was escorted by the military and citizens to Jarratt's Hotel, and thence to the residence of Col. Wm. R. Johnson, where he was received with that cordial hospitality which the owner of the mansion knows so well how to dispense, and then left to his repose.

On Friday morning the rain still continued, (a "Providential Dispensation," we presume the pious Amos Kendall will term it,) but Whig enthusiasm defied the elements; and at 11 o'clock an immense crowd of citizens, with the Guards and Dragoons, assembled in the front of the Exchange, whence, under the command of Chief Marshal Panuill and his assistants, they proceeded to the quarters of the guest. Mr. Clay's appearance was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, which he acknowledged with that grace which characterizes his every action. When Mr. C., accompanied by the President of the Clay Club and Col. Johnson, had been seated in a barouche drawn by four fine horses, the procession moved for Poplar Lawn. About this time the rain had ceased, and as the cortege moved along the streets, the windows were crowded by the "better portion of humanity," whose beautiful smiles and waving kerchiefs testified that "Harry of the West" could confidently count on the votes of the ladies, were they necessary to his election to the next Presidency.

When the procession arrived at the Lawn, Mr. Clay was conducted to a rostrum, in which were seated the officers of the Clay Club. He was then addressed by William Robertson, Esq., who, in a short but most appropriate speech, expressed the unmixed pleasure which his presence in Petersburg gave to his friends.

We copy entire the Intelligencer's synopsis of Mr. Clay's reply:

In reply, Mr. Clay commenced by returning his thanks for the kind terms in which he had been presented to the assembled crowd by Mr. Robertson, and for the cordial greetings with which his first visit to Petersburg had been welcomed. He said, that when about leaving his home for New Orleans, some four months since, he received a letter of invitation to visit Petersburg, from his friends in this town, which, in conformity with the rule he had prescribed to himself of not deviating from the route which a previous engagement obliged him to follow, he had respectfully declined; but learning from a second communication from his friends here, that his journey from Raleigh to Norfolk could as conveniently be performed by the way of Petersburg as by any other route, he had gladly availed himself of the opportunity thus afforded of seeing, for the first time, this interesting portion of his native state.

Having gone to New Orleans on private business, he had taken advantage of the only opportunity, which, in all probability, would ever be afforded him, of visiting that portion of the country comprised by Alabama, Georgia, and the Carolinas, and of redeeming a promise, sometime since made, of visiting his friends in North Carolina. More than two years ago, he said, he had been invited to North Carolina, and was on the point of accepting the invitation, but learning that his friends in that State intended at that time to place him in nomination for the Presidency, he promptly deferred the pleasure of a visit to some future time. The Whig members of the last Legislature having reminded him of that promise, and insisted on its fulfillment, he had paid them a visit this spring. Every where on his extended route, Mr. Clay said, he had been welcomed with the most cordial hospitality, extended to him alike by Whig and Democrat, and it was not until he approached the confines of Virginia, his native State, that the spirit of party had manifested itself against him.

In order to get to Washington from Raleigh, he must travel through some part of this State, or turn back, and he said, that those who knew him knew full well that it was not his habit to turn back; but that when he had taken his course, he always followed it. He thought he might venture, without reproach, to place his foot on his native soil, to enjoy the birthright, to which, as a native of Virginia—of the Slashes of Hanover—he felt that he had some claim. But, (holding in his hand an extract from the Rich-
